

FREDERIC BROWN

Answer

DWAREv ceremoniously soldered the final connect with gold. The eyes of a dozen television cameras watched him and the sub-ether bore throughout the universe a doz-en pictures of what he was doing.

He straightened and nodded to DwarReyn , then moved to a position beside the switch that would complete the contact when he threw it. The switch that would connect, all at once, all of the monster computing machines of all the populated planets in the universe—ninety-six billion planets—into the supercircuit that would connect them all into onesupercalculator , one cybernetics machine that would combine all the knowledge of all the galaxies.

DwarReyn spoke briefly to the watching and listening trillions. Then after a moment's silence he said, "Now, DwarEv ."

DwarEv threw the switch. There was a mighty hum, the surge of power from ninety-six billion planets. Lights flashed and quieted along the miles-long panel.

DwarEv stepped back and drew a deep breath. "The honor of asking the first question is yours, Dwar Reyn ."

"Thank you," said DwarReyn . "It shall be a question which no single cybernetics machine has been able to answer."

He turned to face the machine. "Is there a God?"

The mighty voice answered without hesitation, without the clicking of a single relay.

"Yes, now there is a God."

Sudden fear flashed on the face of DwarEv . He leaped to grab the switch.

A bolt of lightning from the cloudless sky struck him down and fused the switch shut.
